Cost Benefit Analysis

Table 1a: Costs and Benefits of the Proposed Changes (Primary Option)

(1) Direct &amp; Indirect Costs &amp; Benefits (Monetized)	Directs providers regarding requirements for written policies and procedures specific to the use of monitoring devices, as necessary for safety and operational purposes in a provider service setting. Direct Costs: The guidance document is not enforceable; therefore, it does not change the underlying regulations related to individual right to privacy and confidentiality or provider responsibilities to ensure a safe and therapeutic treatment environment. This guidance is not expected to result in a direct cost for providers. The guidance document clarifies that when a provider determines the need to utilize monitoring devices in a service setting, it must have policies and procedures that make clear for individuals, families, and staff the purpose for the use of the monitoring and how the provider will hold best practices in tandem with individuals' confidentiality, safety, and privacy. Indirect Costs: N/A. Direct Benefits: DBHDS guidance documents are not enforceable, and therefore, this change will not result in any direct benefits for providers,

	as there is no change to the underlying regulation regarding requirements for providers to assure privacy and confidentiality for individuals while ensuring a safe and therapeutic treatment environment. This guidance document is expected to reduce unnecessary administrative processes by clarifying that when (i) monitoring devices are positioned in common areas and (ii) the protections referenced in regulation have been addressed in a provider’s policy and procedures, then the use of monitoring devices does not require review by a local human rights committee. Additionally, guidance may help individuals by clarifying that processes established for monitoring cannot be used to diminish or substitute for provider staff responsibilities specific to supervision and support of individuals receiving services. Indirect Benefits: N/A.

Table 1c: Costs and Benefits under Alternative Approach(es)

(1) Direct & Indirect Costs & Benefits (Monetized)	There is no alternative to issuing the guidance document. If the document is not issued, then the current misunderstanding and noncompliance with the regulatory requirement for written, approved policies will continue unchecked. The costs and benefits of such action are described in Table 1b.

Impact on Local Partners

Table 2: Impact on Local Partners

(1) Direct & Indirect Costs & Benefits (Monetized)	Community services boards (CSBs) are the only local partners impacted by this regulation. There are no direct or indirect costs associated with the issuance of this guidance document, as DBHDS guidance documents are not enforceable. The direct benefit to local partners is the same as the direct benefit to private providers. This guidance document provides clarification regarding human rights regulations and the use of
