2 VAC 5-180 Rules and Regulations Governing Pseudorabies in Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services June 9, 2015

Summary of the Proposed Amendments to Regulation

The Board of Agriculture and Consumer Services (Board) proposes to repeal this regulation.

Result of Analysis

The benefits likely exceed the costs for all proposed changes.

Estimated Economic Impact

The existing regulation provides the framework for the eradication of pseudorabies in Virginia swine. Pseudorabies is an infectious disease of swine, and it can also affect other domestic animals. Pseudorabies was common in swine in much of the 20th century, but through a structured and effective program, it has been eradicated from commercial swine in the United States. Through the testing of swine, removal of those swine found to be positive for pseudorabies, and vaccination of susceptible populations, as required in the regulation, pseudorabies was eradicated from Virginia, with the last known case occurring in the 1980s.

According to the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services (VDACS), since pseudorabies in swine was eradicated the tests and programs included in the regulation have not been utilized in at least 15 years. If pseudorabies returns to the Commonwealth, VDACS has the ability to manage disease outbreaks and quarantine animals under statutory authority. Thus, repealing this regulation will have no impact beyond the benefit of decreasing the chance that readers of the regulation would be misled concerning current requirements. Therefore the proposed repeal of the regulation will produce a small net benefit.

Businesses and Entities Affected

Repealing this regulation will have no impact beyond decreasing the likelihood that readers of the regulation would be misled concerning current requirements. When the regulation was utilized, it affected persons, farms and firms who owned, shipped, sold, lent, leased or traded swine in Virginia.
